

How to Find Your Why | A Guiding Worksheet

Original Post: 8 Reasons I Decorate My Home + How To Find Your Why

In finding your why, you must consider your definition from step 1, but also what drives you personally to continue to work and rework the rooms in your home even when the proverbially shiznit hits the fan. Understanding the feels and your home's purpose is important, but why? Why do you want your family to live in this environment you have defined? Is it for mental clarity? Perhaps to tell the story of your family to all who enter... give them a glimpse of you. Is it a creative outlet for you to also give back to your family with a stress-free environment? You can read about my reasons for decorating in the original post linked above, but for this guiding worksheet, let's answer the important question... What's your why?

Answer the following to guide your answer.

1. What is your homier home definition?

Copy this down from step 1. If you haven't completed this yet, go back to the free resources page and follow the Defining your Homier Home Guiding Worksheet. (password: MHHhomey)

2. What is your home's purpose? In other words, what do you believe home should provide you and your family?

3. Describe the environment you currently live in.

Does it stress you out? What needs to be improved? Do you have mental clarity? Does it feed your soul?

4. What do you and/or your family stand to gain if your home is improved? In other words, why do you think these things need to be improved.

5. What drives you to complete these improvements? Is there a feeling you are after or an aesthetic you are trying to reach? What keeps you coming back when the going gets tough?

6. Why are you pursuing a homier home? Answer this in a complete sentence.
